

Leadership Luncheon Lecture

Twenty-one Days

That is how long we would have before Hawaii's stores of oil would run out should there be a disruption in the supply of crude to our islands. It's the length of time between comfort and chaos. If Hawaii hopes to free itself from this dangerous addiction to imported fuel, we'll need to change our energy game. Our strategy for the past half century—rolling the dice on the availability of cheap oil—is a gamble that just doesn't work in an era of changing economies, changing world order, and a changing climate. Hawaii needs game-changers to meet our islands' 21st-Century energy needs. This presentation will explore the path to Hawaii's clean energy future, Blue Planet Foundation's role in shaping energy change, and Hawaii's opportunity to be a global

Henk B. Rogers

Is a Dutch-born computer game designer and entrepreneur, best known for bringing Tetris to the United States and world markets. Currently, Rogers leads multiple software companies, and is the founder of the Blue Planet Foundation, whose mission is to end the use of carbon based fuel in the world, starting with Hawaii. Rogers currently serves on multiple boards including, among others, the Hawaii Science and Technology Council/Institute and The East-West Center Foundation.

Leadership Luncheon Lecture Series

This is a new seminar series designed to fit into the busy schedules of local leaders in the public and private sectors.

The 21st century will present new challenges to leaders the world over. Our mission at APC is to give business and government leaders of the Asia-Pacific community the knowledge and inspiration they need to cope with the effects of burgeoning populations, increasing development, and increasingly volatile international interactions.

We invite you to come and gain insight into the changes sweeping this important region, and to broaden your perspective on global economics, politics, business, and environmental issues. For the latest luncheon lecture series schedule, please visit <http://www.apchawaii.org> or call (808) 942-0698.

APC is a non-profit, educational institution, established 2005. Other programs include a two-year intensive course ending in a Masters in Intercultural Leadership (MIL), as well as short-term workshops and certificate programs designed for students to broaden their cross-cultural perspective on leadership styles and issues in the Asia-Pacific region.
